CARE PHILOSOPHY

Being supported by Glenholme means being safe.

Our priority is safety; both physically and emotionally. We believe that individuals should be supported to take positive risks whilst ensuring that they are protected from potential harm.

We recognise the importance of well-being. Those we support are encouraged to prioritise their well being. This includes becoming familiar with accessing the range of services available to ensure physical and mental well-being. All our staff are trained in well-being issues such as pain recognition as well as the implications of certain syndromes for health conditions.

Being supported by Glenholme means being listened to.

Our support is genuinely person centered, we spend time working out what matters to the individual and how we can ensure they receive it. We know that we can achieve the best outcomes for people by working in partnership with Being supported by Glenholme means being included.

Those we support are part of their local communities. OUR VALUES

Glenholme is passionate about delivering safe, individualised care and support to promote independence, choice and inclusion. We work hard to provide the support we would want for our own family members. We believe in treating individuals, their families, friends and our staff with respect and dignity; placing a high value on equality and diversity. We do this by employing compassionate well-trained staff in our high quality, warm and welcoming homes.

INDIVIDUALISED SUPPORT

Glenholme is fully committed to providing Person Centred Care to ensure that individuals are at the centre of all decisions around their lives. The support provided is tailored to focus not only on their needs, life circumstances and health choices; but also on what is important to them, including their wishes and aspiration.

First and foremost the person is treated with the utmost dignity, compassion and respect. They are supported to develop the knowledge, skills and confidence they need to more effectively manage and make informed decisions about their life and how to achieve their goals. We do this by using a process that involves active listening and specific communication support. It also recognises the role that family and advocates may play around the individual's wishes.

Although this might seem an obvious approach, all too often care is based on doing things 'for' or 'to' people. At Glenholme we do things 'with' those we support in a holistic person centred way.

POSITIVE BEHAVIOURAL SUPPORT

The Positive Behavioural Support (PBS) model underpins Glenholme's commitment to delivering truly individualised support for people whose behaviour may challenge.

Our staff receive bespoke PBS training to enable them to identify, assess and develop individual Behaviour Support Plans. These are based on observation, and input from those involved in their life, in order to assess the individual's emotional, social, health and environmental needs.

PBS works by understanding and predicting the frequency, intensity and likelihood of individual triggers for unwanted behaviours. This enables us to develop a series of strategies to meet the individual's needs by reducing their anxiety and increasing their tolerance levels. This supports the person to effectively and safely achieve positive outcomes. This helps to enhance the individual's lifestyle and wellbeing, as well as increase their ability to learn new skills without unnecessary restrictions.

Support Plans are then reviewed regularly to make sure they fully reflect the risks associated with the individual's current needs, interests, health and wellbeing.
